Perhaps Elvis Presley was called the father of rock'n'roll, but the man who invented the rock band with its guitars, keyboards and drums was Buddy Holly. Born in Texas in 1936, Buddy learnt to play the violin and the piano when he was very young. But he soon discovered the guitar. When he was only 13, Buddy was playing country music with school friends in local clubs.

Buddy formed a group called The Crickets. They played different styles, like country or blues. Buddy wrote the songs. They started recording some of them with the Decca Record Company. Buddy Holly and The Crickets became famous. They were popular with teenagers. Some of their biggest hits were That'll be the day or Peggy Sue.

In 1958, when he was 22, the group went on tour in Britain. It was a great success. Buddy became even more popular in Britain than in the USA.

Back in the USA at the beginning of 1959 he began a series of concerts in the American Midwest. One evening, with two other singers, Buddy got on a small plane to fly to the next concert. After eight minutes the plane crashed. Everyone on the plane was killed.
