Helping animals in the USA

Americans love animals, and so there are several charities helping animals that are in trouble.

The most famous is the organization called OPA (Organisation for Protecting Animals). It was founded in 1950s and since then it has built 10 more hospitals and other 25 centres for protecting animals. The most important job they do is that they try to save animals that are almost extinct. They also look after wild animals that are injured and finally they release them back to the nature. If you want to help this organisation you can become a volunteer in the centres or hospitals and later you can teach other people how to take care of injured animals. You can also join OPA to help with fundraising because it needs money for the animals.

Another organisation taking care of animals is SBA (Save Birds Association) that started in 2000. This organisation is a bit smaller than OPA. It has got 15 centres but it hasn't got any hospitals. There are usually vets working here and they primarily take care of injured birds. They also make shows for schools to teach children about birds. If you would like to help this association you can give some them some money or you can work as a volunteer in any of their centres.
